First of all, as a rule, I use only three thread colors on my serger—black, white and beige. When working on serging projects, I gather everything that works with a particular thread color and do all of that serging before changing the thread and moving on to the next color group. If my serger were as hard to thread as the Bernina Bernette Funlock 004D, I would purchase the largest thread cones possible and would probably never change the thread until the cones are completely out of thread. The stitches are clean, perfectly formed and well balanced. Clean, perfectly formed and well balanced stitches. When my friend received this serger as a gift, it came with no accessories and no owner's manual. There are others out there, old and new, that are far more user friendly, though. If it were not for the challenges with the threading process, this would be an excellent serger, one that I would certainly consider for use by beginners. The difficulties with however, might discourage even an experienced home sewer with little experience in syringes from using it. In fact, the woman who owns this one admitted that she changes the line as seldom as possible. The first challenge is to remember which thread spindles are for the upper or lower handles, when she first obtained it, the owner of this particular serger used a label to remind her that the front thread positions are for the top handles. The Bernina Bernette Funlock 004D is quiet and fast. The fabric moves across the feeding dogs smoothly and evenly. The on-board diagram makes it look very simple. However, I suspect that even if Looper were present, that would be a big problem. Once this obstacle was cleared, and I was ready to stitch the Funlock 004D, the going was great. BERNINA Image not available for Color: To view this video download Flash Player. While visiting a fellow sewer, I had the opportunity to review her serger, a Bernina Bernette Funlock 004D, an old model portable serger for home use. Threading any serger can be a bit daunting, but in my opinion this one is very close to taking the prize for being one of the most difficult threading systems on any serger I have ever seen. Your reasoning? The wires are in anyway. Who will see them? I can't say that I disagree with her. My own serger is much easier to thread and I find myself doing much the same. In reality, threading the Bernina Funlock 004D is anything but simple. Although the owner's manual shows the user how to thread the machine, it is almost impossible to thread it following these instructions. This may be because the machine was not included with this machine when my friend received it. I found a manual online. If you don't have one of these sergers or if you shouldn't know anyone who might have received it as a gift or purchased it at an 'sale or online on a site like e-bay and you're looking for a manual, you can't download it for free here. If you are not. At the time of the challenge of putting this compact and lightweight serger, you can not be able to find one on e-bay for less than 100 dollars. Characteristics available in Bernina Funlock 004D include: Cutting the Machine's Feed Differential Length Adjustable Point width Adjustable Point width Adjustable Cut width Bernina Bernette Funlock 004D's Press alluding to the challenges of sticking Bernina Bernette Funlock 004D up. Then there was the placing of the thread supports, which are almost completely hidden behind the Machine. Bernina Bernette Funlock 004D. When I opened the bottom layer cover, I noticed the threading instructions apparently simple, in fact, the only serger of your collection of about four or five sewing machines. At a glance. The first thing that called me to fear when I saw the serger Bernina Bernette Funlock 004D were the red marks on the front. That tag was still there when I went to review the Machine. Necessary to open the door on the left side to thread the thread. The challenge was to thread the lower lasers.
